

GERMANY'S „BLANK CHECK“ TO AUSTRIA-HUNGARY

After Sarajevo, Count Leopold von Berchtold, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, drew up a letter for the Emperor Franz Joseph to sign and send to Wilhelm II to try and convince both of Serbia's responsibility. On July 6th, Wilhelm II and his Imperial Chancellor, Theobald von Bethmann-Hollweg, sent Berchtold the following telegram which outlined what became known as Germany's "blank check" to Austria-Hungary.

Telegram from the Imperial Chancellor, von Bethmann-Hollweg, to the German Ambassador at Vienna. Tschirschky (6 July 1914)

Berlin, July 6, 1914 Confidential. For Your Excellency's personal information and guidance

2 The Austro-Hungarian Ambassador yesterday delivered to the Emperor a confidential personal letter from the Emperor Franz Joseph, which depicts the present situation from the Austro-Hungarian point 4 of view, and describes the measures which Vienna has in view. A copy is now being forwarded to Your Excellency.

6 I replied to Count Szögyény today on behalf of His Majesty that His Majesty sends his thanks to the Emperor Franz Joseph for his letter and would soon answer it personally. In the meantime His Majesty 8 desires to say that he is not blind to the danger which threatens Austria-Hungary and thus the Triple Alliance as a result of the Russian and Serbian Pan-Slavic agitation.

10 Even though His Majesty is known to feel no unqualified confidence in Bulgaria and her ruler, and naturally inclines more to ward our old ally Rumania and her Hohenzollern prince, yet he quite 12 understands that the Emperor Franz Joseph, in view of the attitude of Rumania and of the danger of a new Balkan alliance aimed directly at the Danube Monarchy, is anxious to bring about an 14 understanding between Bulgaria and the Triple alliance [...].

His Majesty will, further more, make an effort at Bucharest, according to the wishes of the Emperor 16 Franz Joseph, to influence King Carol to the fulfilment of the duties of his alliance, to the renunciation of Serbia, and to the suppression of the Rumanian agitations directed against Austria-Hungary.

18 Finally, as far as concerns Serbia, His Majesty, of course, cannot interfere in the dispute now going on between Austria-Hungary and that country, as it is a matter not within his competence. The Emperor 20 Franz Joseph may, however, rest assured that His Majesty will faithfully stand by Austria-Hungary, as is required by the obligations of his alliance and of his ancient friendship.
