

General Discussion Questions on Artistic Creation

What does it mean to "create art" based on a literary work?

How do different artistic mediums (e.g., visual art, theater, film, music) bring out different aspects of a literary text?

Why do some adaptations become more famous than the books they're based on? What does this say about cultural consumption of literature and art?

If you could turn one literary work into a piece of art in another medium, what would you choose and why?

Can the act of reading be seen as a form of artistic engagement or creation?
