

General Discussion Questions on Family

How does the concept of "family" shape the identity of a character in the story?

In what ways does the family unit provide support or create conflict in the narrative?

How are traditional family roles (mother, father, sibling, etc.) upheld or challenged in the text?

What role does generational conflict play in the development of the story?

How does the absence or loss of a family member affect the protagonist?

In what ways do characters choose to redefine "family" through friendships or other bonds?

How is the concept of duty or obligation to one's family portrayed in the text?

How does the setting (historical, cultural, or social context) influence the family dynamics in the story?

Do family secrets or hidden histories play a role in the plot or character development?

How is forgiveness within families portrayed in the narrative?