

General Discussion Questions on Desire for Freedom

How do characters in the text define "freedom"? Is it physical, emotional, political, or spiritual?

In what ways is the desire for freedom shown as a natural human instinct in the story?

How does the struggle for freedom shape the character's identity?

Is freedom always portrayed as positive, or does it come with consequences and burdens?

Does the text suggest that true freedom is achievable, or is it always compromised by social constraints?

How does the denial of freedom create conflict in the text—both internal and external?