

General Discussion Questions on Self-Discovery

How does the setting (cultural, historical, or physical) shape the character's process of self-discovery?

What role do relationships (family, friends, mentors, or antagonists) play in the character's understanding of themselves?

In what ways does the character's self-discovery challenge or reinforce societal expectations?

Is the character's journey toward self-discovery complete by the end of the text, or does it remain unresolved?

How does the text make you reflect on your own journey of self-discovery?

Do you think true self-discovery is ever fully achievable, or is it an ongoing process?