

General Discussion Questions on Social Justice

How does the author highlight issues of inequality or injustice in the story?

Does the narrative critique legal, political, or cultural institutions? In what ways?

Are there examples of systemic oppression, and how do they compare to individual acts of discrimination in the text?

How does the story resonate with contemporary social justice issues?

What lessons about fairness, equity, or activism can readers take from the text?