

General Discussion Questions on Illusion

Can illusions sometimes be more comforting or necessary than reality for survival?

How does the need for survival influence the characters' moral choices?

Are there moments where illusion protects a character emotionally, even if it endangers them physically?

Are there illusions that society perpetuates that help or hinder characters' survival?

Is it ever justified to live in illusion if it ensures survival?