

General Discussion Questions on Revolution

How are ordinary citizens affected by revolution, and how do they respond to power shifts?

What social, economic, or political conditions are depicted as catalysts for revolution in the text?

Are revolutions in the text portrayed as inevitable, or could they have been avoided?

How are justice and morality depicted in the context of rebellion?

Does the text suggest that violent revolution is necessary for societal change, or are other methods portrayed as effective?

Can the themes of revolution in the text be related to contemporary social or political movements?